

Dr. Jeanette Adele Callahan is an Assistant Professor at Harvard Medical School and General Pediatrician at Cambridge Health Alliance. She is a graduate of Harvard Medical School and MGH for Children's Residency Program.

In her role as Medical Director with the Justice Resource Institute's Northeast Health Service Unit, she supervises a team of Nurse Practitioners providing primary care to committed and detained youth in the Department of Youth Services.

Dr. Callahan is the co-founder of The Wellness Collaborative, Inc (TWC). Founded in 2018, TWC is a non-profit interdisciplinary collective that works together to provide education, insight and best practices promoting sustainable personal and community health, wellness, and resilience.

She is currently an active board member of Urban Edge CDC and Cathleen Stone Island Outward Bound School where she serves on its Safety Committee.

Her commitment to underserved communities has taken her to South Africa, Ghana and Brazil where she organized and joined several humanitarian outreach teams providing needed medical supplies and direct primary and preventative care to adults and children.
