

Thomas W. Mitchell is a professor at Boston College Law School where he founded and serves as the Director of the Initiative on Land, Housing & Property Rights. He is a national expert on property issues facing disadvantaged families and communities. Professor Mitchell has engaged in extensive policy work, including serving as the principal drafter of a model state statute named the Uniform Partition of Heirs Property Act (UPHPA). 25 states/jurisdictions have enacted the UHPA into law thus far, thereby helping many disadvantaged families maintain their property and wealth. Professor Mitchell also has helped develop other state and federal property proposals designed to help disadvantaged people.

In 2020, Professor Mitchell was named a recipient of the MacArthur Fellowship in recognition of the substantial impact his overall professional work has had in assisting disadvantaged farmers and property owners. In 2021, he was awarded the Howard University Award for Distinguished Postgraduate Achievement. Professor Mitchell is a graduate of Amherst College, the Howard University School of Law, and the University of Wisconsin Law School where he also served as a William H. Hastie Fellow.
