

Devin Morris is the cofounder and Executive Director of The Teachers' Lounge.

Devin co-founded TTL in 2018 with then business partner Jabari Peddie. They began this work because throughout their own K-12 and college experiences, as well as in their professional careers, they witnessed the under-representation of Educators of Color in lead teaching positions and felt the effects of not having a teacher with whom they could identify and see themselves reflected. Together, they sought to change this reality for future generations of students by creating and curating spaces intended to increase the recruitment, revitalization, and retention of Educators of Color across the Greater Boston Area.

Devin received his Marketing degree from Boston College in 2005. After over 5 years of working in footwear design & product development, Devin received a Master's in Business Administration from Babson College, with a focus on Social Entrepreneurship and a rediscovery of his passion for education. Now in his 15th year in education, Devin has held roles in teaching, coaching, mentoring, school leadership, student/staff recruitment and retention, marketing, and development in district, charter, and private schools in NYC and The Greater Boston Area.

Outside of co-founding TTL, Devin sits on several local and national coalitions supporting the diversification of the teacher workforce in support of all students. Devin is also the Vice Chair of the Commission on Black Men and Boys with the Boston Mayor's Office, and the Chair of the Education Committee.

Devin has a passion for equity, community engagement & collaboration, program development, execution, and collective accountability.
