

Christopher Kim Agnew is an MPP2 at HKS, a fellow at the Center for Public Leadership, and an Air Force officer. A distinguished graduate from the Air Force Academy, he led co-ed and all male small groups designed to spark discussions about faith, race, and sexuality. He also served as his squadron's diversity and inclusion officer, where he held discussions centering on inclusive leadership for 100 cadets. Lastly, he helped revamp training exercises for 4,000 cadets by implementing greater team building dynamics to boost peer-leadership development. Chris studied abroad at Helmut Schmidt University, Hamburg and spent two summers researching at the National Security Agency. At HKS, he is focused on improving Air Force readiness post-DEI.
