

For the last twenty-five years Aba Taylor has held key leadership roles with mission-driven institutions working to uplift BIPOC communities, women and girls, immigrants, LGBTQI communities, and other historically disadvantaged groups on local, regional, national and international scales. From working internationally at the United Nations to leading high impact social justice and philanthropic organizations and efforts, Aba has committed herself to supporting the capacity of nonprofit, educational and philanthropic leaders, groups and institutions dedicated to social transformation.

Prior to joining YW Boston, Aba was the Executive Director of a community foundation in Greater Boston and previously held multiple senior leadership roles at the Interaction Institute for Social Change (IISC). Prior to that Aba was the Executive Director of the Network for Social Justice and the Chair of the Massachusetts Human Rights Coalition, and before that the Deputy Executive Director of the Astraea Foundation for Justice. Taylor holds a Bachelor of Arts degree from Columbia University and a Master of Arts degree in Nonprofit Leadership and Management from the School of International Training.
